In the summer of 2004, Nancy Marshall, Deaf educator, went to Orange Walk, Belize, to tutor a young deaf boy and teach sign language to parents of deaf children. As she explored the country, she came to the San Felipe Mennonite Church, twenty-five miles from Orange Walk. There in a prominent place was a picture of a woman and in answer to her inquiry, Nancy was told that she is Dora Taylor, who started this church. Nancy thought about this woman who demonstrated a deep commitment to Christ in Belize serving as a missionary nurse and a church planter through Eastern Mennonite Missions (EMM) in 1964-67. Nancy’s own heart was drawing her to return to Belize to begin a church for the Deaf community, but she had many questions and some misgivings. Will a woman be accepted as a church planter in this culture? The picture on the wall gave her an affirmative answer.

Nancy returned to her home in Lancaster, Pa., and sought God’s guidance about returning for long-term ministry in Belize. Dora Taylor was good example for her. In 2005, Nancy visited with Dora in the Virginia Mennonite Retirement Community. Dora encouraged Nancy to pursue God’s calling and promised to pray for her.

Nancy left her job as an early childhood deaf educator in Lancaster and moved to Orange Walk, teaching a classroom full of deaf children in varying ages, and opening her home for worship for deaf children, youth and adults. Her friendly interaction with neighbors, coworkers and members of the Belize Evangelical Mennonite Church made connections that brought people to her home frequently. Jesus’ Deaf Church has been established and now meets in the local church of BEMC. Nancy sent newsletters to a wide circle of supporters, including Dora Taylor, who responded with handwritten letters and constant prayers.

In 2007, just prior to the Virginia Conference Assembly, Nancy visited Dora (or “Dorita” as Nancy calls her, which is an affectionate form of her name) in her room in Crestwood, VMRC. They shared deeply around their common interest of reaching the Belizeans for Christ. Their love and respect for each other was evident. Nancy was deeply moved by Dora’s prayer for her just before saying goodbye.

On March 30, Dora, age 98, went to her Heavenly home. Her mantle has been passed to Nancy, who is serving “the least of these” in Belize through EMM and Virginia Mennonite Missions. Dora’s earthly ministry is completed, and Nancy is carrying it on, to the glory of God.
Ambivalence as Chestnut Ridge leaves Virginia Conference

The chestnut grove no longer exists, having fallen victim to the chestnut blight in the early part of the last century. Four relative newcomers are putting forth their sturdy efforts to again give meaning to the name of the church that has been at home there since 1873. Chestnut Ridge Mennonite Church near Orrville, Ohio, began 70 years after the creation of the state of Ohio. Most of that history has faded from memory like the chestnut trees that once occupied the ridge carrying their name.

What hasn’t died is the continuing witness of Chestnut Ridge Mennonite Church. Reorganized out of a church division in 1953, Chestnut Ridge then became the second of eventually four different congregations in Ohio that held membership in Virginia Mennonite Conference (The others were Sonnenberg, Day Spring, and Dove).

On March 14, Chestnut Ridge officially transferred to Ohio Mennonite Conference. On Sunday, March 29, the congregation celebrated its past 56 years of history with VMC and looked forward to a new era with OMC. Joy was mixed with sadness.

I too felt ambivalence. When I was four, my parents helped reorganize Chestnut Ridge and became charter members of this new congregation. I grew up there. For most of my life, Chestnut Ridge and Virginia Mennonite Conference have belonged in the same sentence. I’ve always enjoyed a return visit, even the Sunday of transfer to OMC.

And then I laid nostalgia aside and noted that Chestnut Ridge is not the same congregation as 136 years ago, or even 56 years ago. The history is there if anyone is interested. A few members can trace their lineage back to those early years. For most members now however, Chestnut Ridge is a living, breathing, witnessing, worshipping and excited body of believers in the present. They are related, not by blood, but through Christ! Signs were abundant! Joy was evident! The four young chestnut trees are growing behind the church!

Virginia Mennonite Conference hands off this healthy congregation to a sister conference with our full blessing. A little plaque commemorating the last 56 years with VMC might hang on the wall, at least when folks from Virginia visit. In time, it too will have less and less significance to those who continue to worship there.

Indulge me, if you will, with one more piece of nostalgia. At the end of the service on March 29, 2009, someone noted that exactly 45 years earlier to the day, I had received water baptism in the Chestnut Ridge Mennonite Church.

Note: Chestnut Ridge Mennonite Church has embraced a strong mission emphasis from its early years and will retain a relationship with Virginia Mennonite Missions.

Loren and Earlene Horst peruse a memento given to them in recognition of Loren’s overseer role to Chestnut Ridge.

Peacemaking past and present in Virginia Conference

By DAVE POWELL
VMC Peace Committee

Here are examples of ways VMC members and congregations have followed the Prince of Peace in the past as well as in more recent times:

Viola Lehman Dickerson from Mt. Pleasant Mennonite recalls German prisoners being held in Fentress during WWII. Some of the prisoners were allowed to work on local Mennonite farms. One day her Dad had to intervene and save those working on his farm—when some local navy men saw the prisoners working and weren't aware of the arrangements—they came at the prisoners with guns drawn. Years later, the Lehman family was pleasantly surprised when one of the prisoner’s grandsons contacted them from Germany, after reading his grandfather’s stories of the wonderful people he worked for in Virginia.

In the late 1950s, Dwight and Vada Swartz from Weavers Mennonite served as chaperones for Fresh Air children returning to their homes after visiting in the Valley. Their own Fresh Air boy’s mother invited them to their home in New York City. The cab driver just couldn’t believe that they wanted to go into that part of town, and at first nearly refused to take them. But they were determined to go, had a great visit, and returned safely.

“I really had to come to grips with my own beliefs about peace when I went through a divorce. Working at the time in a highly competitive business environment, I was counseled by all of my co-workers to fight in court for everything I could, to make sure my wife got as little as possible. But after reflecting on Christ’s teachings, I knew I had to let the anger and vengeful feelings go and work at it as peacefully as I could.”

Anonymously submitted.

The Eastern District churches recently sponsored a workshop on “Healing the Wounds of War,” to help to understand soldiers returning from combat with Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder and to consider ways that our Mennonite Churches can be involved directly in reaching out to them. Since that time, a group from Huntington Mennonite has been actively pursuing the possibility of establishing an “Oasis of Hope,” a safe place where troubled returning soldiers can come for rest, wholeness, healing, and hope.

Mennonite pastor earns Red Cross award for fire response

By SALLY VOTH, adapted from The Northern Virginia Daily

On March 31, Pastor Rodney Lebron received the Red Cross hero award for alerting sleeping family members that their house was on fire. Usually Rodney is in the business of trying to save souls. But his quick thinking and bravery during a December 5 house fire also make him a lifesaver, a feat acknowledged by the Shenandoah County chapter of the American Red Cross, which awarded him the Adult Good Samaritan Hero award.

The mother of the household was at work, and three young adults were sleeping when the fire began engulfing the house. Rodney pushed the door in and yelled for anyone home to get out. The young adults quickly awoke and exited. Rodney made sure that they stayed out of the house, and he tried to calm them.

Later, when the mother arrived and heard about Rodney’s brave actions, she said, “I can’t thank him enough.”

At the award ceremony, Rodney explained his perspective. “Whether I’m a hero or not, is not the point. I took courage with me into the fearsome situation. Courage is not the absence of fear, but rather the knowledge and wisdom that something more important exists.”

Rodney works as a second-shift nighttime maintenance supervisor at Bowman Apple Products. He says, “Now when I drive home at night, I kind of look both ways along the side of the road to see, make sure there are no fires on the way home.”

Rodney pastors the Woodland Mennonite Church in Basye, Va. He and his wife, Mary Ann have served that congregation since 2002.

VMM response to Italy earthquake

By LOREN HORST
VMM President

Inquiries have been received by the Mennonite churches and VMMissions workers in Italy regarding the recent earthquakes in the Abruzzo region of Italy. The area hit is 5 hours north of the nearest Mennonite church. Giovanni Greco, an evangelical pastor friend of the Eberlys, was able to visit the region although could not enter the worst damaged areas. Tremors continue and it is still impossible to fully assess damage.

In the worst hit city, Aquila (population 65,000), people are in tents, hotels, shelters, and other temporary emergency shelter. They are receiving emergency food and water. Some 26 other towns have also been affected.

The Italian government has been well trained for disaster response and has asserted control over immediate emergency operations and relief. The evangelical leaders are considering how they will respond to the disaster. Since the government is giving leadership to immediate disaster response, the churches will compliment the government efforts in additional ways.

VMMissions requests prayer for the people affected by this disaster. Opportunities to assist will follow as more information is available. We stand by our Italian friends, extend our concern to Italian brothers and sisters and are ready to assist as helpful and able.

The epicenter of the earthquake on the map at left is shown in red circles. The underlined city of Bari is where VMMission workers live.

Missions celebrated in six VMC congregations

By GLORIA L. LEHMAN
VMM Caribbean Regional Assistant

Everyone loves a celebration! Since January, the staff of Virginia Mennonite Missions has celebrated missions in six different locations around the Virginia Conference area. Good food, warm fellowship and inspiring stories of God at work in the world characterized each event. Mt. Pleasant Mennonite Church, Grace Mennonite Fellowship, First Mennonite Church of Richmond, Stuarts Draft Mennonite Church, Raleigh Mennonite Church and Chestnut Ridge Mennonite Church each hosted a celebration of missions.

These congregations prepared the meal, provided special music and welcomed persons from the surrounding district to their facility.

Willard and Eva Eberly, Philip Rhodes, Mauricio Chenlo, Ron Copeland, Rodney Nice and others shared about the particular ministry to which they are called. Videos of the work of the Eberlys and the upcoming work of the Nice family in Jamaica were shown. Each evening concluded with VMM president Loren Horst recapping the vision of Virginia Mennonite Missions for the years ahead.

Thank you to everyone who supported God’s outreach by attending and contributing to this important work.
PIM team to London

By CLARA YODER

Shalom Mennonite Church

Where can you experience fellowship with Christians from another culture, satisfaction of doing much-appreciated work, transportation by “tube” or on foot, and the opportunity to visit world famous historical sights? Try going to London Mennonite Centre with a Partners in Mission Team. Our team led by Ervie Glick included James Flory, Jason Rhodes, Emery Yoder, Ed and Clara Yoder. We arrived at Heathrow the morning of February 28. We were met at the airport by Ed Shirk (host at LMC) and Sharon Kniss (Bridge Builder staff from Harrisonburg).

Upon arriving at LMC, a brief orientation was followed by coffee and sweet rolls served by Phyllis Shirk (hostess at LMC). We began our work assignments. The men worked on doing prep work for painting exterior windows and trim while I cleaned shelves in the bookstore.

In the evening LMC hosted Ron Sider and others from across the UK for a meal and to hear Ron Sider speak and discuss the effectiveness of non-violence as a peace-building tool. This event fit right into their mission statement which says “rooted in the Anabaptist tradition, cultivating Christian discipleship as a way of life.” On Sunday afternoon we, along with other folks at LMC, walked the three miles to Wood Green Mennonite Church for an informal but meaningful worship service. On Monday evening we were included in the weekly “house meal” which is a cooperative effort.

Work projects included repairing and painting window frames and trim, repairing garden walls and walks, repairing a bathroom floor, repointing bricks, applying teak oil to lawn furniture, cleaning library bookshelves, construction and assembly of a Murphy bed and repairing the prayer hut.

We enjoyed the London Eye, a visit to St. Paul’s Cathedral, the Tower of London and a wonderful experience at Queen’s Theater where we enjoyed an excellent production of “Les Misérables.” It was a wonderful week of work, fellowship, making new friends and enjoying new experiences.

EMU: a life-changing mission

By JIM BISHOP
EMU Public Information Officer

I’m no spring chicken, and I’ve laid some eggs over the years. But, the older I get and the longer my involvement, I believe this more strongly: that Eastern Mennonite University is a superlative Christian higher education institution. Many others harbor similar feelings, but seem hesitant to come right out and say it.

I say this from my close association with the school that began when I first set foot on campus as a know-it-all freshman the fall of 1963. The next four years would reveal just how little I did know, but I came away with rearranged priorities, a sense of calling to use my gifts in some form of church-related journalism and a new commitment to Christ.

EMU’s strengths: competent, caring teachers, a focus on students, with faith, ethics and knowledge closely entwined, life-changing cross-cultural programs, a strong sense of community—and that’s just for starters.

I graduated from EMU (then EMC) in 1967, as did Anna (Mast), the fair young lady who has been my longsuffering spouse for nearly 43 years. Brothers Bob (’70), Eric (’78) and Michael (’81) followed. Daughters Jenny (’95) and Sara (’00) also graduated from their parents’ alma mater and found employment locally in their respective disciplines. I’m proud, in a humble, Mennonite sort of way, of all their achievements.

Our alumni—some 17,000 strong—are doing amazing things, often behind the scenes, living out our university ideals in servant-leadership roles. I’m constantly challenged and encouraged to read of the amazing things they are doing around the world, often in less than glamorous places, helping the least of these. This has been a prime motivator in keeping me here for some 38 years, helping to tell the EMU story.

I believe in EMU, and that it merits broad, enthusiastic support—through encouraging prospective students (including one’s own offspring) to see what we offer, with financial gifts to the University Fund or other needs and projects and with prayer.

EMU, a Mennonite church-owned school, is equipping students to “do justice, love mercy and walk humbly with God” (Micah 6:8). What greater calling can we have today?
